Clara wishes for a bedroom of her own – a place where she can enjoy playing, listening to music, and relaxing. A sturdy bed, a wardrobe for her clothes, and shelves to keep her toys and other belongings neatly organized would make a big difference. Nine-year-old Clara feels most comfortable when everything has its own place and her surroundings are clear and well-organized. This helps her find her way around and feel more at ease.

Clara has a severe form of early childhood autism. She speaks only a few words and attends a small class at an inclusive school.
